TROUBLE FAR FROM SETTLED

Non-Union Men Failed to Meet Committee of Citizens as Promised

MANY CARS ARE RUNNING

Strike is Still on in the Capital City But Few Disturbances are Reported.

Columbus, O., May 4.—The chances for peace in the street car strike which looked so bright this morning, have faded. The seven non-union men whose refusal to step out of their jobs and allow the company to re-instate the four discharged union men, brought about the strike, failed to meet the committee of citizens today who had planned to offer them better jobs to get out of the way.

Although almost all the cars were running today few disturbances were reported.

The failure of the seven men to appear surprised the committeemen and they are at a loss to explain the move. It had been expected that final arrangements for settlement would be finished at this conference, but the end now seems as far away as ever.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, who was to lecture here tonight on his South Pole quest, cancelled his engagement because of the strike. A stick of dynamite was found on a High street car line near Union station last night a few hours after cars had been withdrawn.

Paul Schneider, in charge of some of the strike breakers, and George Brady, one of the strike breakers under him, were arrested for fighting on the Oak street line. Brady objected with his fists to some order that Schneider had given him.

Columbus, May 4.—Settlement of differences between the Columbus Railway and Light Company, and its striking employees is expected to be consummated today through the efforts of prominent citizens who became active yesterday.

Refusal of seven nonunion men, promoted to fill vacancies created when the strike was declared, to step aside and allow the four unionists to take their old places is all that now blocks reconciliation, according to statements made at mid night.

These men will appear before the group of citizens through whom negotiations were started yesterday. Then the citizens will learn from them directly whether or not they had refused, as reported, to sign petitions for the reinstatement of the four men not returned to work.

The executive committee of the union will be invited into conference with the citizens' committee. A proposition, drawn up to the conference of those working for peace last night by General Manager Stewart and President Sheldon, will be taken up with them and then the entire party will go before a mass meeting of the men, to be held at 121 E. East Town street.

Mr. Stewart said last night there would be a postponement of the lock-out announced yesterday afternoon for 8:30 o'clock this morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon and if necessary until a later hour to enable the men to meet and act on the proposed contract to be presented to them.

The men promoted to the positions of the four not reinstated will be disposed of satisfactorily by the committee of business men when they go into conference, if the business men's hopes are realized. Strikers declare some of these men have expressed a desire to sign petitions for the reinstatement of the four men, but when they asked for petitions at least two hours, they were refused them by the foremen in charge.

Following are the probable points in the peace armistice which may be signed by officials of the railway company and its employees today:

What the Men Get.
Promise that union car men will not be discriminated against and that inspectors and foremen of the company will not be permitted to coerce or influence men away from the organization.
The increase in the wage scale provided in the peace agreement signed April 6.
Agreement of the company to treat with its employees on a committee, representing them, about conditions for which they have cause to complain; reinstatement of the four men not replaced prior to the strike.

What the Company Refuses.
Recognition of the union.
Arbitrary removal of the seven men in the way of the return of the four.
Further advance in wages.
Establishment of temporary arbitration boards for settlement of disputes between company and men.
Appeal of the men to company's board of directors.
Refusal of the company to remove the seven men declining to step back for the four men out and denial of appeal to the board of directors were thoroughly thrashed out in last night's conference. As there was nothing to interfere with the men taking a complaint to the board of directors at any time, this was considered superfluous. The disposition of the seven men, who alone stand between a complete reconciliation, is believed to be safe in the hands of those before whom they will appear. They either will be induced to step back and permit an adjustment of conditions, or be given positions in Columbus business enterprises and eliminated entirely from consideration.

"There is absolutely nothing now to prevent the return of the strikers to their old positions but the attitude of the seven men promoted to fill the places made vacant by the discharge of the four," said President R. E. Sheldon of the company last night, after leaving the last conference between officials of the company, representatives of business men's associations and members of various local unions.

"And this is not a matter for adjustment by the company," he continued. "The four men now out may return to their old positions the minute those occupying them agree to relinquish their places. I believe there is every reason to think a settlement will be reached tomorrow."

Unionist representatives in last night's conference protested against any settlement which did not put the four back in their old places. They feared that unless this was specifically provided for, the four, while being paid as much as they drew before, would be given disagreeable work.

Seven men were responsible for the failure of the four men to get their old positions back. These men were in three main divisions and were part of the entire number affected by the discharge of the four men.

When men on the early runs are discharged, the entire line of first, second, third, etc., early run men move up a notch. That's what happened in the divisions from which these four men were dropped. Their return means that every one of the men shifted must move back. Among the 60 or more affected, seven have refused to sign petitions for their own reduction. That's how seven most provide places for four.

These are the men who are trying to settle the strike. Arbitrators will make an effort to dispose of them in a manner satisfactory to themselves and the men today.

GARY TO HAVE GREAT HARBOR

Chicago, May 4.—The largest inland harbor in the world is to be built along the lake front at Gary, Ind., the new steel city of the U. S. Steel corporation, if present plans don't miscarry. Hundreds of acres will be filled in and for a mile along the shore line docks of concrete and steel equipped with electric cranes and the most modern loading and cargo handling devices will be constructed extending for half a mile into the lake.

ADD MILLIONS TO POPULATION

Washington, May 4.—Unofficial estimates given out by the census bureau today estimate the increase in population in the United States since 1900 at 15,121,036. Greater New York is estimated at 4,563,603. Chicago 2,282,926. Cleveland 520,938. Cincinnati 354,912.

Columbus, 158,848; Toledo, 178,863; Dayton, 112,668.

PRESIDENT IS UNION MEMBER

Cleveland, O., May 4.—President Taft, member of the Steam Shoemakers' Union, faces a fine of from $10 to $25 and expulsion from the union if he attends the Naps at St. Louis today in defiance of the boycott being carried on against the team by the unions here.

Men not replaced prior to the strike.

What the Company Refuses.

Recognition of the union.

Arbitrary removal of the seven men in the way of the return of the four.

Further advance in wages.

Establishment of temporary arbitration boards for settlement of disputes between company and men.

Appeal of the men to company's board of directors.

Refusal of the company to remove the seven men declining to step back for the four men out and denial of appeal to the board of directors were thoroughly thrashed out in last night's conference.

As there was nothing to interfere with the men taking a complaint to the board of directors at any time, this was considered superfluous.

COLUMBUS POLITICIAN INDICTED

Is Charged With Bribery of Marion County Official

GRAFT TRAIL LENGTHY

State Examiners Claim It Leads Into More Than Half of the Counties of Ohio.

Columbus, May 4.—James Ross, a Democratic state central committeeman and former sheriff of Franklin county, and J. D. Gillespie, former Republican commissioner of Marion county, for bribery, and Hamilton C. DeWeese, a Democratic inspector in the state building and loan department, formerly in charge of the speakers' bureau for the state committee for making out and receiving payment on a false account, were among the 15 indictments returned yesterday by the Franklin county grand jury, after a six days' session.

None of the men was arrested yesterday. They will be arraigned in common pleas court and their bonds fixed today.

Three separate indictments were returned against Ross and Gillespie. Ross is charged with giving three bribes of merchandise, aggregating $104.75, to Gillespie, July 27, 1907, Dec. 5, 1908 and March 4, 1908, to influence the latter in passing upon certain bills for office supplies to be presented to the Marion county commissioners by the Ruggles-Gale Co., of which Ross was then president.

The three indictments against Gillespie charge that he received the alleged bribes from Ross on the dates mentioned.

There are two indictments against DeWeese, charging him with collecting on false witness fees $24 from the state in 1897, while assistant state fire marshal under the D. S. Creamer administration. One indictment charges him with unlawfully collecting $11 and the other $13.

A penalty of one to 10 years' imprisonment in the penitentiary is the statutory punishment for conviction of the charges against Ross and Gillespie. DeWeese, because of the size of the amount he is alleged to have unlawfully received, is only charged with a misdemeanor, punishable by $200 fine and 30 days imprisonment in the county jail or workhouse.

Ross said yesterday he did not know Gillespie and consequently never had any business dealings with the man. He asserted he would appear in court this morning with an attorney to give bond and to plead to the indictments.

According to the indictments against him, Ross played on the weakness of Gillespie for fine hosiery and wearing apparel. The first indictment charges that he gave Gillespie a bill of goods July 27, 1907, amounting to $104.75. In it, according to the indictment, were:

Two pairs of shoes at $6.50 and $7 each.
Two pairs women's hose at $3.75 and $2.50 each.
Pair of slippers, $2.
Three pairs socks, $1.50.
Six shirts, $16.50.

The second indictment charges that Ross, on Dec. 5, 1908, gave Gillespie a $50 raincoat, and the third says he gave the Marion county official $25.82 in merchandise March 4, 1908. In the last bill are items for a $25 raincoat, half a dozen pairs of socks, two neckties and a pair of shoes.

Ross is charged with unlawfully and corruptly, with intent to influence him, the said Gillespie, as county commissioner of Marion county, with respect to his official duty, to wit: to influence him as such officer in the approval and allowance of bills and vouchers for the office supplies to be presented by the Ruggles-Gale Company to the Marion county commissioners.

Gillespie is charged with unlawfully and corruptly receiving the merchandise for being influenced in

SENATOR LORIMER AND OFFICIALS INVESTIGATING BRIBERY SCANDAL

Springfield, Ill., May 4.—Governor Dummer, Attorney General Stead and State Attorney Weisman of Chicago, promise to make a complete investigation of the charges on Representative Charles A. White that he was paid $1,500 to vote for Senator William Lorimer. While Illinois is doing some investigating, the Senate has also taken the charges under consideration, and a second Senator Clegg scandal may result. Senator Lorimer has issued a statement in which he enters a good and decided to all the points made by White and declares the case is an effort on the part of a Chicago newspaper to injure him in a political and financial way. Senator Lorimer has just owned a bank and trust company in Chicago.

the allowance and approval for payment of bills rendered to the Marion county board of commissioners by the Ruggles-Gale Company.

Ross, by the grand jury's action, was caught in the trap which he himself set to have indicted state and county officers who are alleged to have profited in permitting the Ruggles-Gale Company to pad bills for office supplies sold to them. He gave to Governor Harrison, after he left the Ruggles-Gale Company, books of alleged commissions paid to state officers. This started Governor Harrison on the trail of what he considered graft. Evidence obtained by him was turned over to the Henry Legislative investigating committee, which had accountants working on the books of the Ruggles-Gale Company for many weeks.

Evidence obtained by state examiners showed a trail that is said to have led from three state departments and more than half the counties of Ohio. The Franklin county grand jury took up the investigation then. Former purchasing clerk in the offices of the secretary of state and railroad commission, in addition to Judge John T. Gale, president of the Ruggles-Gale Company, George L. Ruggles, former president of the concern, and John W. McAfferty, former official of the county and former warm personal friend and business associate of Ross.

These indictments are said to have brought considerable efforts have been made. It is not known, however, whether the Ruggles-Gale Company man for the Ruggles-Gale Company, asked to testify before the Henry legislative investigating committee, will do so. He was charged with receiving the privilege of being sold to a former county official for the Ruggles-Gale Company, a large sum of money which was paid in Ross' indictment.

The first indictment against DeWeese charges a false charge for witness fees, aggregating $11, made in 1897, while assistant state fire marshal under the D. S. Creamer administration. The second indictment charges him with unlawfully collecting $11 and the other $13.

Gillespie is charged with unlawfully and corruptly receiving the merchandise for being influenced in

SISSY BOYS ARE HAPPY

New York, May 4.—"My dear Perry, won't you join me in a cup of tea?"

Such invitations as this are now to be heard in the neighborhood of No. 7 East 41st street, where one of the cutest little team rooms in the world has just been opened.

And oh joy! Tell it to Reggie, Herald and the others it is exclusively for men. M-E-N. The room is as dainty as its prospective patrons and the proprietors promise the guided tures which he considers essential are killed.

Old timers of the party here have expressed the opinion that if Roosevelt were president he would not be on a speechmaking trip while one of his pet bills was being torn to pieces at Washington.

President Taft was a guest at a series of dinners, made several speeches, attended both the National and American league ball games, took a drive through the boulevard, and ended the day as guest of honor at the Traffic Club's banquet.

In his speech before the farmers' convention the president favored the establishment of a national board of health and confined his address to a discussion of the conservation of human life.

Before Taft, John Temple Graves spoke. He lauded the present administration and denounced Roosevelt, saying that he took up all the popular measures while president and then fled to Africa as soon as his successor faced the job of putting through unpopular, though necessary, measures.

DEFENSE GRANTED CONTINUANCE.

Tulsa, Okla., May 4.—The defense was granted a continuance today in the famous "town lot" cases, in which Governor Haskell is implicated.

MINISTERS WANT FIGHT STOPPED

Philadelphia, May 4.—Philadelphia Methodist ministers are endeavoring to start a nation-wide protest against the Johnson-Jeffries fight in California on July 4. At the weekly meeting of the Methodist Preachers' Association a resolution was adopted which reads:

"Resolved, That the permission of this fight can be regarded as nothing less than a national disgrace and a calamity to the moral life of our people; that the Philadelphia preachers' meeting protest against the permission of this fight and that we invite the ministers of all denominations in the state of Pennsylvania and in other states to stir their people and to unite with us in a protest to the governor of California against the permission to conduct this fight."

Appeals to Governor.

San Diego, May 4.—The Ministerial Association of the city has sent a telegram to Governor Gillett, protesting against the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Calls It Desecration.

Oakland, May 4.—Branding the marriage of a woman to the greater Oakland police judge as a desecration of the altar, the Oakland Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, today adopted a resolution protesting against the marriage of Jeffries and Johnson on July 4. A public mass meeting will be held in Oakland on July 4 to protest against the marriage and the order of the community is planned.

CLAIM VIOLATION OF ELECTION PLEDGES

Washington, May 4.—President Taft, officials and cabinet members angry and disappointed today over yesterday's emanation of the administration railroad bill, declare that the party has been already killed and even though they put through some kind of a railroad bill, the insurgents will have violated the pledges by which they secured election.

REBELS VICTORIOUS.

Constantinople, May 4.—The Albanians have captured the town of Djakovica after a battle in which the loss of life was heavy. The rebels now control all railways about Pristina.

EXPERT'S DAMAGING EVIDENCE

Found Twice Enough Poison to Kill in Col. Swope's Liver

MRS. SWOPE TO TESTIFY

When State Closes Dr. Hyde Will Take Stand in His Own Defense.

Kansas City, May 4.—State Attorney Conkling announced today that Mrs. Logan O. Swope will be the last witness for the prosecution in the trial of Dr. B. C. Hyde, alleged slayer of Col. Thomas F. Swope and Chrisman Swope. With the close of the state's case Dr. Hyde will take the stand in his own defense.

Dr. Victor Vaughn, professor of toxicology at the University of Michigan, the last of the experts to testify for the state, resumed the stand today. Dr. Vaughn showed the jury by aid of a powerful magnifying glass he took from Colonel Swope's liver. He and Professor Haines found almost a grain in the viscera, he said, almost twice the amount required to kill.

In answer to a hypothetical question Dr. Vaughn said he believed Colonel Swope and Chrisman Swope died and Margaret Swope was made ill by some "convulsive poison."

Strychnine and cyanide of potassium are such poisons he said. He declared he found cyanide in the bodies of the Swopes.

Dr. Vaughn was positive Dr. Hyde erroneously diagnosed the cause of death in the cases of the Swopes. They did not die of apoplexy or spinal meningitis, he said, but of some poison.

FIRE DESTROYS ENTIRE TOWN

Tokyo, May 4.—Scores of persons are dead or injured and many others are reported missing as the result of a fire which destroyed 7,000 buildings at Almorí yesterday. Almost the entire town was destroyed.

There is great suffering from lack of food and clothing. Refugees are flocking to this city. Only the heroic work of the military forces prevented a huge list of casualties.

WOMEN WILL TOUR STATE

Chicago, May 4.—Illinois suffragettes announced today that they will tour the state this summer, making speeches from the back of automobiles, as the political spellbinders and liniment vendors did in the old days. They expect to cover two or three towns daily.

MET AT TRAIN BY RULERS

Christiania, Norway, May 4.—By U. P. Staff Correspondent.—Today's demonstration when King Haakon and Queen Maud greeted the Roosevelt party overshadowed any former demonstration in the history of the city. The king and queen did not await Roosevelt in their palace, but were actually the first to meet him as he stepped from the train. Col. Roosevelt was pleased with the democracy evidenced by this informal greeting.

After a short visit with the rulers he lunched at the American embassy. A state dinner was given last night in his honor.

HAS JOINED THE REBELS

Belgrade, May 4.—Issa Conlatinat, famous tribal chieftain, and the 10,000 men of his tribe who have up to this time been loyal to the government, today joined the Albanians and the old leader will probably be made commander in chief of the rebels. The fighting continues unabated and hundreds are being killed and wounded.

Disposition an Asset.

No one need complain he has no capital if he is inclined to cultivate the right sort of disposition or if he has it already. The man or woman who is utterly penniless still is not poor, if he or she has a good disposition. They can be business at once on it and they will find it such remarkable good capital that success will pour in upon them right from the start.

A young fellow from the country came to Philadelphia seeking work. But he was untrained for anything special and being offered a job on the street at some heavy lifting took it. It was but a few days, however, when an accident happened to the foreman of the gang, before he was promoted to his place. Some one asked why one who had been at the work but a short time was given such a position. "He's the best natured chap I ever saw," said the man who had appointed him. "Nothing is any trouble. Nothing is too much work. He keeps the men all in good humor and gets more work out of them than any other man on the street."

The fellow's disposition had secured him the job. If he had been a supply of coal or grunting because he had to do so much work, or if he had been a scowling fellow, he would have been in the ranks of the unemployed.

John Hillbrand carries "Bee Tree Case" to Supreme Court—News Found at Court House.

The case of Letts against Hillbrand is one of the interesting cases set for trial on the assignment list of the common pleas court. It grows out of the famous bee tree episode near Homer, where John Hillbrand, a prominent farmer of Burlington township, at 2 o'clock in the morning discovered Letts and others cutting down a bee tree on his place, and in an altercation which ensued Hillbrand shot Letts with a revolver after being severely injured with a hatchet in the back of Letts. Hillbrand was indicted for shooting with intent to wound, but was found guilty of assault and battery. Hillbrand is seeking a reversal of this judgment in the supreme court. The case soon to be tried is a suit for damages brought by Letts on account of his injuries. Waiter A. Moore, of Mt. Vernon, represents the plaintiff, and Fulton & Fulton, of this city, represent the defendants.

Common Pleas.

In the suit brought to contest and set aside the will of the late E. H. Haas, of this county, the arguments of counsel were concluded Wednesday morning and the court charged the jury as to the law of the case. A readjustment of civil cases will be made tomorrow morning.

John Hillbrand carries "Bee Tree Case" to Supreme Court—News Found at Court House.

The case of Letts against Hillbrand is one of the interesting cases set for trial on the assignment list of the common pleas court. It grows out of the famous bee tree episode near Homer, where John Hillbrand, a prominent farmer of Burlington township, at 2 o'clock in the morning discovered Letts and others cutting down a bee tree on his place, and in an altercation which ensued Hillbrand shot Letts with a revolver after being severely injured with a hatchet in the back of Letts. Hillbrand was indicted for shooting with intent to wound, but was found guilty of assault and battery. Hillbrand is seeking a reversal of this judgment in the supreme court. The case soon to be tried is a suit for damages brought by Letts on account of his injuries. Waiter A. Moore, of Mt. Vernon, represents the plaintiff, and Fulton & Fulton, of this city, represent the defendants.

CONGRESS FOR TARIFF BODY
Members Divided, However, as to Power It Shall Have.
TO PRESS THE GROCE CLAIMS

Knox Serves Notice on Nicaragua.
Longworth's Boom For Governor.
Treaty Rights and Federal Power.
President Taft's Alaska Trip.

Washington, May 4.—Whatever else is done by this congress, it now seems fairly certain that some sort of tariff commission will be established. At present the fight is as to whether this body shall be a mere board which shall report to the president or a commission in fact which shall report to congress. The insurgents and Democrats want a commission in fact. The regulars favor a board. Their program is to make the $20,000 appropriation asked for by the president and to give the tariff board specific powers to investigate cost of production and other tariff facts at home and abroad. Even though this is not all the advocates of a tariff commission ask for, they feel that it would be a long step in the right direction.

Leonard Groce's Widow in Need.
It was recently reported that the widow and children of Leonard Groce, the American executed in Nicaragua, are in dire want. Secretary Knox has therefore asked the United States consul at Managua to relieve their need pending the payment of indemnity by Nicaragua. The language of Mr. Knox's instructions is regarded as a notice served on Nicaragua that the claims will be pressed.

Longworth For Governor.
There is a renewal of the boom for Nicholas Longworth for governor of Ohio. When the suggestion of Longworth's candidacy was first made he waived it aside by the statement that he preferred to remain in congress. The renewal of the talk would indicate that his consent has been gained. The question that is just now agitating the capital is whether Mr. Longworth's nomination would mean that his distinguished father-in-law would take the stump in his behalf.

Railroad Bill Now Has Teeth.
The Madden amendment to the railroad bill is regarded as the most radical legislation yet attempted on the question. The amendment, which was adopted in the committee of the whole house by a vote of 191 to 67, calls for physical valuation of the roads. This is the proposition for which Senator La Follette has made his long fight. In the beginning he seemed to have little support. Yet not only the insurgents and Democrats voted for the amendment in the house, but a goodly portion of the regulars as well. The chief opponents of the Madden proposal were Townsend, the author of the house railroad bill, and Mann, the chairman of the committee that has it in charge. Taken together with the provision already adopted, including telegraph and telephone companies, the Madden physical valuation amendment makes the railroad bill an utterly different measure from that prepared by Attorney General Wickham.

Ballinger Would Still Clear Claims.
One of the most striking statements made by Secretary Ballinger in his testimony before the investigating committee was that with the same record before him he would clear the Cunningham claims now as he did in the beginning. To make this the more emphatic he reiterated it several times.

Federal Power in Treaty Rights.
The address of President Taft before the Society of International Law reiterated a point brought out by former President Roosevelt at the time of threatened action of the California legislature on the Japanese question. The contention of both presidents was that in all matters affecting treaties with foreign nations the federal government must be supreme. In other words, the power to promise must carry with it the power to fulfill.

Senator Sutherland's Daughter Wed.
One of the most notable social events of the winter was the marriage of Miss Edith Sutherland, daughter of Senator Sutherland of Utah, to Mr. A. Robert Emory of New York. The president and vice president and a large array of senators and their wives were present. After a six weeks' honeymoon the newly married couple will make their home at Los Angeles, Cal.

Will Keep Away From Alaska.
The president's latest trip through the central west will keep him out of Washington till the end of the week. On his return he will shortly go to New York to be present at the launching of the battleship Florida. Little has been heard of late of the contemplated trip to Alaska next summer, but as no announcement has been made of its abandonment it will probably be made as scheduled. Various and sundry congressmen are likewise yearning to get away from Washington, but they have no designs on Alaska—no, indeed. The most interesting spots on the map to these gentlemen are their own particular districts, where there is a job of fence mending to be done and votes to be garnered against next fall's election. Some of these statesmen feel that their districts may seem as cold as Alaska in November, but they do not want the arctic thing in advance.

ON A SLENDER THREAD

When we read that the Taft bill in Washington hangs on a thin thread, and that "administration leaders are concerned over the chances of passing these measures," it reminds us of what a slender thread the Woodruff bill hangs on in the Ohio legislature until it was defeated by a division of the majority in the Senate which makes us smile at the frantic efforts of the Republican party to lean to lay the blame upon Governor Harmon and the Democratic minority in the Senate.

It is amusing how Democratic minorities are always blamed by a majority for what they do or fail to do.

Formerly, members of the legislature, before they were elected, were asked to take the following oath: "I, the undersigned, do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States, and the laws of the same, and will faithfully discharge the duties of the office to which I am elected, and will not accept any bribe or reward for my services."

The other day in California Rev. Malcolm James McLeod, a Presbyterian minister, who will soon undertake ministerial duties for a New York congregation of large wealth, edited one issue of the Pasadena Star. He entered the editorial offices with the young vigor of an undaunted conviction that nothing in the nature of the newspaper business presented an obstacle to a man of intelligent theories, even though the details of execution were unknown to him. He did his day's work and the profession, observing the fruit of the labor of the amateur, said that he did it well but here is the expression of his revised convictions:

"My time is now almost up as I pen this last line, my hand is almost paralyzed, my brain is befuddled, and I am free to confess that I am right glad to vacate the holy spot. Such rush and riot and disarray. Such a humble and pitiful effort. It strikes me as the daily effort to bring order out of chaos and to do it lightning quick. I am reminded of the memorable words, 'The earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit moved upon the face of the waters.' Never shall I criticize newspaper men more. I shall pray for them. They shall have my heart's forbearance henceforth and forever, the hardest worked, the shortest lived, the poorest paid brain workers on this weary old world of ours."

REJOICING AT THE FINAL END

The people of Ohio are realizing pretty fully the great relief that is afforded by the practical adjournment of this discredited Legislature. True, there is a final day, the 10th inst., when the actual adjournment occurs, but the people are enjoying the relief afforded by the recess till that day.

As stated by the Advocate a few days ago, the State has never been afflicted with a Legislature so wholly unworthy and unpopular as the present one has been in both sessions.

Governor Harmon's administration has been handicapped greatly, especially by the session just closing, and it is to be regretted by the people of Ohio generally that a Legislature should interpose such a detriment to the success of a model administration like that which the present Chief Executive has afforded the state.

As has been previously stated, Governor Harmon is to be especially congratulated over this Legislature's adjournment.

The people will rejoice that this Legislative interference with the grandest administration of the Governor's office during the present generation is coming to a final end.

NOT BINDING ON ANYBODY

The Ohio State Journal (Keep) declares that the result of the primary to be held this year is not decisive upon the selection of Dick as Republican candidate for Senator, and argues that his nomination will not be binding upon a Republican legislature.

Neither will the nomination of the G. O. P. convention for governor or for any other place upon the ticket made any difference in the balance of power upon the Republican voters of Ohio in November.

In its anxiety to defeat Dick the Ohio State Journal is ready to throw the Republican voters of Ohio to go about it in November to make it "Harmon and a clean sweep" and give him a legislature with a majority in both branches that will work in harmony with him to promote the welfare of the state.

There are lots of people who are afraid to sit down at a table with Dick, but a hungry small boy is not one of them.

COUNCIL OF GRANVILLE HELD MEETING

Shepardson Park Land Company Offered to Dedicate Streets of New Addition to Village.

Granville, O., May 4.—The regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening, and when Clerk Evans called the roll of members at 7:30 o'clock, all the members were found present with the exception of Mr. Ashbrook, those responding to their names being Messrs. Ferguson, Jones, Partridge, Kuster, Thomas and Mayor Barnes in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the clerk and approved, after which the clerk read the reports of the treasurer, clerk and board of affairs for the month of April. All the reports were received and ordered filed.

Mayor Barnes made his report for the months of March and April, and was received and ordered filed. The finance ordinance was read by the clerk and on motion the rules were suspended and the ordinance placed on its second and third readings and final passage.

Dirney P. Trask, trustee of the Shepardson Park Land company, appeared before the council with a plat of the new Shepardson Park subdivision to Granville, with a proposition to dedicate to the public the streets of the new addition. While the acceptance of the new addition to Granville is something greatly to be desired it developed that there was some opposition to the proposition as it now stands, by several of the property owners along the line of the proposed subdivision, on account of the waste water overflowing their property. The matter was discussed at considerable length and it was finally referred to the street committee to report at an adjourned meeting of the council on next Monday night. The council will also visit the new addition on Thursday evening. It is understood that quite a large number of new residences will be constructed here during the summer, and it will certainly be one of the most desirable locations in the village.

The street committee, through its chairman, reported that nearly all the street signs had been placed in position, and that the remaining ones would be placed as soon as possible. For some time past this spring a number of the members of the Denison athletic association have been getting themselves in readiness for the cross country races that are soon to take place, and which are annual events in college life. As is considered necessary, the students practicing for these events are very scantily attired, and there are some people who profess to be greatly shocked by their appearance and want them prohibited from running through the streets of the village. Who ever heard of a college student taking part in a race attired in a dress suit?

On Friday evening the girls of the Philomathean and Buterpean Literary societies will present the play, "A School for Scandal." The entertainment will be given in the Opera House. Already a large number of seats have been sold, and the indications are that the girls will be greeted with a crowded house.

This evening the Shepardson Glee Club will give its concert in Recital Hall. A splendid program has been prepared and the affair promises to be one of the most successful musical events of the season.

The Denison ball team will contest with Cincinnati on Beaver Field on Friday afternoon and the game promises to be a hot one from start to finish. Both teams are old rivals and each will do its utmost to win supremacy. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Baker of Hamilton, O., who have been visiting relatives and friends here during the past week, returned home Wednesday.

The May Carnival given by the girls of Shepardson college will be held May 20th on the campus. The carnival will consist of a tennis tournament, various races, outdoor games and a May-pole dance. This event is looked forward to for months with fond anticipation by many as the big event of the college year.

Raymond Evans of Pittsburg, has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Evans at their home on Granger street.

Miss Minnie Barnes' division of the Junior Baptist Young People's Union, gave a surprise for her in the form of a picnic at Spring Valley last Saturday afternoon.

CAN YOU GUESS SIZE OF NEWARK?

MANY PLACE RECENT COUNT AT 30,000 OR 12,000 MORE THAN LAST CENSUS.

Work of City Enumerators Completed, But They Are Not Allowed To Give Out Information.

The working of taking the great 1910 census of the United States has been practically completed in the cities. Thousands of men and women all over the country and in the foreign holdings of the United States have been working almost day and night to complete this big job in the allotted fifteen days. Rural census takers have thirty days in which to complete their work.

Much speculation as to the population of Newark, as revealed by the government census, is being made in various quarters, but no definite information can be secured until the department at Washington gets ready to give it out.

One of the enumerators for Newark was asked if he had any idea what the city's population would be. He replied:

"I wouldn't tell you if I did. The government pledges us to secrecy, and if I gave up anything I know I'd be liable to a fine of a thousand dollars. So there's no chance to find out anything from me."

At the last government census it was shown that Newark had in the neighborhood of about 18,000 population, and it is the belief of many people who have closely watched local conditions, that notwithstanding the depression of business, and loss of a great many families during the late financial depression, that the city will show a population close to 20,000.

The census enumerators for Newark, who completed their work in a manner highly creditable to themselves, were: Messrs. William J. Mossman, William L. Fisk, Miss Alma Grove, W. E. Teegarden, Miss Carrie M. Conway, Earl F. Woodward, Carl C. Ward, J. L. Benner, James W. Scott, Edmund M. Wieserke, Milton R. Scott, Thomas J. Baird, Wilbur F. Maxwell, Owen T. Robinson, George A. Ayer, Charles E. Cummings, Dennis C. Brown, Bryce S. Taylor, J. C. Marshall, Cliff Rosebrough, T. W. Montgomery, Samuel H. McClary, Kirby I. Dickinson, and Frank Plack.

The Newark enumerators have sent their reports to Census Director Peter C. Given of Wooster, who has been in charge of this district.

With all this work and the fine system adopted by the government there is sure to be a few persons missed, but the work in Newark is said to have been a most successful one, and while a few oversights might have been made, yet the work has been thorough in general. On account of the wide publicity given the work the people have been very willing to tell the enumerators all the answers to the thirty-two questions asked and this has aided in the speedy completion of the work. It will be several months before the government will be able to give out figures that will be of any interest to residents of Newark; but we'll put the mark at 30,000, and let it go at that.

WOULD HAVE BEEN OF GREAT BENEFIT

The attention of the State Journal was called by Hon. Edward Kibler, of this city, to a recommendation that the Municipal Code Commission made to the legislature some years ago, which would have been of great benefit to Columbus at this time, had the legislature adopted it, and that is a provision of law by which whenever any franchise company like street railways, for any reason, fails to furnish public service required by the council may order the solicitor to have a receiver appointed to operate the company's property and furnish the service required until the court is satisfied of the company's ability to furnish the service, when the receiver shall be discharged. This proposed law recognizes the fact that the public interests are more important than the private dissensions and contentions between the employees and their employers, and the further fact that there is no law at present which protects the public interest in such matters. There is no doubt of the powers of the legislature to enact such a law.

YOUR KIDNEYS NEED CLEANING

Every Person, Healthy or Unhealthy, Ought to Give the Kidneys a Thorough Cleaning Right Now.

You clean your teeth daily. You wouldn't think of doing otherwise, and yet the teeth are not one-tenth so important to health, strength, and a long life as the kidneys.

Do you know that the kidneys are little strainers or fine sieves, through which every drop of blood in the body passes again and again?

Do you know that when the blood passes through the kidneys these little sieves strain all the impure matter from the blood and pass it out of the body by way of the bladder?

Well, all this is so, as any physician will tell you, and this being the case, doesn't it stand to reason that these little strainers in the kidneys become clogged with impurities?

And when the kidneys become clogged they are unable to strain the impure matter from the blood, and it stays in the blood and causes diseases in various parts of the body. Take rheumatism for instance, this terrible disease is caused by uric acid in the blood, and uric acid gets into the blood only when the kidneys are clogged up and are unable to properly strain the impurities.

An ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure when the kidneys are concerned. It's almost as easy to clean out clogged kidneys as to clean your teeth.

Just go to W. A. Erman & Son today and get a bottle of Thompson's Barosma, the most scientific kidney, liver and bladder regulator the world has ever known, take it regularly for two weeks, and all the impure matter in your kidneys will pass through the bladder, and your kidneys will be as pure and clean and healthy as any kidneys can be.

Thompson's Barosma is guaranteed by W. A. Erman & Son to cure all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder, or money back. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and will bring the flow of health to the cheeks of the sick in a short time. 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

WEARER FOUND FOR ADELAIDE'S SLIPPER

When Adelaide, the dancer, opened her engagement at the Auditorium theatre Monday, a challenge was issued to any lady in Newark to the test of wearing one of her ballet slippers. One of them was placed in Meridith Bros. show windows, on North Third street.

Taylor, wife of a well known B. & O. conductor, residing in the Hatch flats on Church street, was making a purchase in the store, when a friend bantered her to try on the tiny slipper. ## TERRIBLE CROUP

One Who Knows Recommends a Remedy to Anxious Mothers.

My little boy, who is four years old, has suffered a lot with croup. On several occasions we thought he was gone.

After trying all of the old time remedies and most of the new, I came home one night at midnight, and my wife said, "The boy has the croup again—suppose you get a bottle of Homedol." "More junk," I said, "but we will circulate our money and see if we will get something more."

I hastened to an all night drug store, brought it home, in five minutes he was breathing easier. In fifteen minutes he was sound asleep. I broke the croup so quickly that it scared me.

Anyone wishing to cure the croup of a child I hope will give Homedol a trial.

Washing your face with soap, which you surely deserve, I remain, Joe E. Clark, 244 6th St., S. E., Washington, D. C. Oct. 7, 1909.

Homedol is a remarkably effective remedy in case of croup and it should be in every home where there is a young child. Full instructions how to cure croup comes with each bottle.

Apply Homedol freely, in including finger ends, at all drug stores everywhere, at Evans' Drug Store. It is guaranteed to cure croup, coughs, colds and sore throat.

The Paint Question

IT'S the proper time to ask about paint; YOU, who have property to preserve and beautify; and want to do it to BEST ADVANTAGE.

Ask what? Not "How cheap per gallon?" but "How far will my gallon go?" not measured in units of space alone, but in units of time; not alone in SQUARE FEET but in ROUND YEARS.

You'll get as many answers as there are paint dealers. The honest answer will come only from paint itself. Therefore, use an honest, lead and oil paint.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a tonic. It does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic. Ask your doctor all about this.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Mr. Rooster and the Sunrise

"I'm going to tell you a little story tonight, children," said daddy, "just to show you that some people are not so important in this world as they think they are. It's about Mr. Rooster and the sunrise."

"There was a big red feathered rooster, with a fine red comb on his head, who lived in a farmer's barnyard. There were also in the barnyard a flock of hens, a guinea fowl, two ducks, a cat and three pigs."

"Mr. Rooster thought he was the most important thing in the barnyard. He would strut all around and show off before the other fowls and the animals."

"Every morning Mr. Rooster would get down off his perch very early, before daylight, and stretch out his legs. Then he would raise his head very high and crow so loudly that it woke up all the hens and the other neighbors in the barnyard. They would all come knocking around Mr. Rooster."

"Just then the sun would begin to rise above the hill to the east, and Mr. Rooster would say: 'See there, now! It's my crowing that makes the sun rise. If I didn't crow it would be dark as night all the time!'"

"'Hurrab!' cried all the others. 'Mr. Rooster is our king. He makes the sun rise and gives us light so we can run around and find good things to eat.'"

"Mr. Rooster kept getting prouder and prouder of himself, but at last he fell in love with Miss Plymouth Rock Hen, who was the most beautiful of all the hens. Miss Buff Cochise Hen, who was very jealous because she loved Mr. Rooster, told Miss Plymouth Rock she didn't believe Mr. Rooster really made the sun rise by his crowing. 'The sun would rise anyhow,' she said, 'every morning about 6 o'clock.'"

"So the next morning Miss Plymouth Rock got down from her perch a little earlier than usual and walked out in the barnyard with Mr. Rooster. Just when Mr. Rooster was about to raise his head to crow she put one of her wings over his head. Mr. Rooster liked to be petted that way, and he let his head stay under Miss Plymouth Rock's wings and forgot to crow."

"Just then the sun rose over the hill as usual, for it was time for daylight to come. Miss Plymouth Rock took her wing off Mr. Rooster's head and said, very angry: 'There! You've been fibbing to me. You don't make the sun rise at all. It rises whether you crow or not. I don't like you any more.'"

"After that Mr. Rooster was laughed at by all the hens and the animals, and for three mornings he refused to get off his perch until broad daylight."

Mickey's View of It

(Copyright 1910, by Benj. B. Hampton.)

PRIVATE MICHAEL J. BARRET is a soldier, but this kindly designation of mine is quite necessary to the casual observer. For one of his shoulders droops forward outrageously, his mouth is a great good-humored snarl, and his words come through one down-drawn corner of it. A tuft of scruffy red hair on the back of his head stands aggressively up like a cockatoo's crest. He makes wistful little gestures with his hands—like a vaudeville tough—and his language is beyond the purview of formal military procedure. However, Barret is a soldier. His troop number is 52, and he witnessed the more or less mutinous burning of Pacloban (Municipality of Macoor, Province of Paracac), and this is how it happened.

Pacloban was a hideous, parasitic little village of stilted native coons, that existed upon the lives, money, and morals of the "toothed boy" troopers of the Nth U. S. Cavalry, stationed at Camp Pacloban, Department of Luzon. Down its single tortuous street meandered a muddy trickle of unspeakable water in which hollow-stomached, naked babies and sad-eyed, peck-backed pigs paddled about all day, crowding the chattering group of bare-bosomed and not uncommonly lecherous who squatted in the shade of the bamboo road-side, slapping the wet garments of soldiers against the washing stones in an ill-considered effort at cleansing. But the blood of the life of this barrio was buco de rays, otherwise asado, otherwise "red-water." This is a peculiarly sinister fluid about which folks at home know nothing. It will rob a white man of all sense of moral decency in a month and send him home—if he ever sees home—a drooling idiot; ordinarily it keeps him near it, a broken skulking thing, shunned by his countrymen and despised by his associates, save only the brown woman who came in, probably, with the second month of the buco, who is usually faithful to the chattering end. When you judge Mickey Barret, remember all this.

For one day there was enticed to Pacloban the Pretty Boy of "L" Troop. He was not called Pretty Boy in derision, for the troop loved him, from the captain to the cook. Scarcely seventeen was Private O'Dham when he ventured in among the first best-buds of Pacloban—scarcely seventeen with the round blue eyes of a child and the bloom of an Illinois farm still peachy in his cheeks.

Three days later, "L" troop's first sergeant found him face downward in the mud of the streets, his fingers dabbling in the green water and his face beaten a raw, blood-red coloration by the brown men who had taken his monthly pay. When the sergeant spoke the thing in the road heaved to its hands and guttured at him like a great ape.

There was little talk when "L" Troop saw the boy, no raging and cursing such as soldiers use when they grumble. There was only an ugly stillness in the squad room and some minutes of vicious growling on the line. But an hour after retreat, a red tongue of flame licked up toward the eastern clouds and in thirty minutes Pacloban was an unlovely memory of charred sticks and ashes. A complaining horde of vanishing little people descended on the colonel's quarters and the great Pacloban investigation was fairly on. The natives could mention no names—not even troops—for the men had taken the insignia from their collars and muffled the lower portion of their faces with handkerchiefs. But there was one soldier who had taken no part. He simply watched it all with huge apparent glee and cried, over and over again—so the natives said—"So-ek-tem bo-ec. Hard it to lem. I've bought this boory three times over on the monthly payment plan an' ec's all yours." They further deposed that they had seen this man often before and that he was called Meekie.

So Mickey was a witness before a board appointed "to investigate &—the mutinous, riotous—& burning—& & of Pacloban—& &—to the scandal and disgrace of the military service—& & & Mickey was a witness—Incompetent, incredulous, biased and unwilling, but nevertheless a witness, and each of the three members of the board, as Mickey said, "took their fall out of him," beginning with the bluff, good-natured major of Mickey's squadron, to all of ey, with the cockatoo whose questions Mickey appealed virtuously to the ceiling, his hands gesturing frantically from stiffened wrists, had answered, "Hawnest to Ga-d, major, youse is p'pin' off the wrong lay. I don't know nuttin' about it. That's hand-in' it to you straight, major, or You can search me, major, I don't know nuttin' about it," and all the while pleading, with twinkling eyes that betrayed him, a virtuous and aggrieved innocence. The major flustered and fumed and ordered the oath to be re-read, he appealed to the "soldierly sense" of Private Barret, but all to no avail, and he was passed on to his own captain, a mild-mannered man who understood him—within limits—and wasted few efforts in futile words, and thus Mickey came at last before Captain Solenenson of the Nth.

The big man rose and walked toward the witness. Before he asked a question, he leaned down and placed his face within six inches of Mickey's and sneered at him for a moment.

"You think you're mighty wise, don't you, my fresh friend?" The major frowned and pulled his words. Mickey's Captain shuffled his feet uneasily and Mickey gripped his fists and did not answer.

"I know all about you. None of your phony talk goes with me—Stand? On the night of the eighteenth of April you went to Pacloban on pass. You saw the men come into the town. You talked with some of them and saw them drive the natives out of the houses. Then while the burning proceeded you stared and cheered it—stayed until the last house was down. Now proceed—"

During this recitation, Mickey's face had grown tense, all the Irish in his eyes twinkled out, and there came a cold, hard glare that met his inquirer's gaze steadily.

"If youse knows so much about me, why you jus' tell ahead an'—"

Mickey stopped short, agast at his own boldness, for his words constituted an offense of impertinence almost unknown to the military system.

The face of his interlocutor became contorted in an agony of lineament. He stood crouched above the smaller man and struggled with his mind for words. At last his voice came in a tone that was almost a shriek.

"You—" the words trailed out now in a flood of guttural abuse, black words that so shocked the gentlemen who heard them that they were for a moment at a loss. The major spoke first.

"That will do, I think, Solenenson. You have allowed this man's impertinence to rob you of your self-control. Private Barret, I will give you a note, with which you will report to the commanding officer."

Mickey had been in that throne room before. The announcement came like a douche of cold water that returned to him his perspective of the things of his hedged-in life and left him secure in all his ancient brazenness again.

The colonel read the note slowly and sat for a long time tapping his desk with his rimless eyeglasses. After an interminable time (to Mickey) he looked up and cleared his throat.

"Private Barret, even with all the appearances against you, you are a good—a pretty good—soldier."

In Mickey's answer, he was entirely deliberate and malicious. He explained it by an inherent dislike of "con talk."

"Oh, I knows dat, your honor."

"You know it, do you?" The colonel rose in his chair as though some one had lifted him by the hair. "You know it, eh? You're the most insubordinate, undisciplined hummer in this regiment. What do you think this office is—a police court?"

"No, your honor—"

"Don't your honor me again—"

"I meant 'colonel.' I didn't mean dat str."

"Very well, don't say it again. As I was saying, you are a pretty good, a fair good soldier; that is, you have some good points. But sometimes you are a mighty worthless soldier. Just now you were a Rover's summer. Nothing could have pleased Mickey more. The cockatoo crest quivered. "And what you want before a board of officers under oath and failed to tell the truth, you were a down right scoundrel."

"Now a lot of soldiers went down to Pacloban like a band of boxing red Indians—went into a 'peachy' native village in the dead of night and fired it in ten places so that it burned in an hour, depriving four hundred harmless, helpless people—"

"Dep ain't be'less homeless people, colonel," interrupted Mickey, with scorn. "dat was de worst case of strong arm men knock-out droppers, short-change artists an'—"

"Silence!" roared the colonel, who was wading himself to avenge a first by his own remark. "Helpless, I say, and harmless, cast almost naked into the world by a lot of dissolute ruffians—by my own regiment, the Nth Cavalry—the cleanest, dearest, hardest fighting outfit in the Register, with the best record—untill now—their reputation is gone forever—and mine, sir—mine and every chance of promotion I ever had—wiped out in a single night by a lot of bummers on a spree."

"You hate the power to right all this and to avoid half the scandal—understand scandal!"

"Sure do I, dem things St. Peter an' an dem od g'ave used to wear on deir foots? Well I guess—"

The colonel was none too sure about all this but he began all over and explained from the first. "So you see, you had the reputation of the regiment in your hands. I want you to make a clean breast of the names of all those men now and acquit yourself nobly, of it."

"Private Barret, I want you to give me this information for the—honor—of—the-regiment." "Honor of de regiment?" Mickey kept the wide eyes of innocence. "Honor of de Regiment—vots dat?" "Silkch on your comrades," And Mickey grinned—and left the office soon and swiftly.

The Nth attended the division maneuvers at Panay. There were parts of almost every regiment in the islands there, beside any number of observers from the foreign troops in Asia—British, French, German, and Japanese. The Americans exceeded others of blank ammunition and fought a very realistic war over two provinces. The Nth coasted itself with glory and toward the end of these gave a great dinner to as many officers as the camp as it could crowd about its tables, in honor of the foreign officers.

Mickey Barret belonged to his troop's stable crew and slept in a small shelter tent near the grain pile. With a three-army about on a holiday two weeks from now, it is just as well to be watchful, and Mickey climbed in among the sacks and sat there watching the big tropical stars go sunning across the sky and thinking of a "rag" who had lived on Avenue A in the unregenerate days.

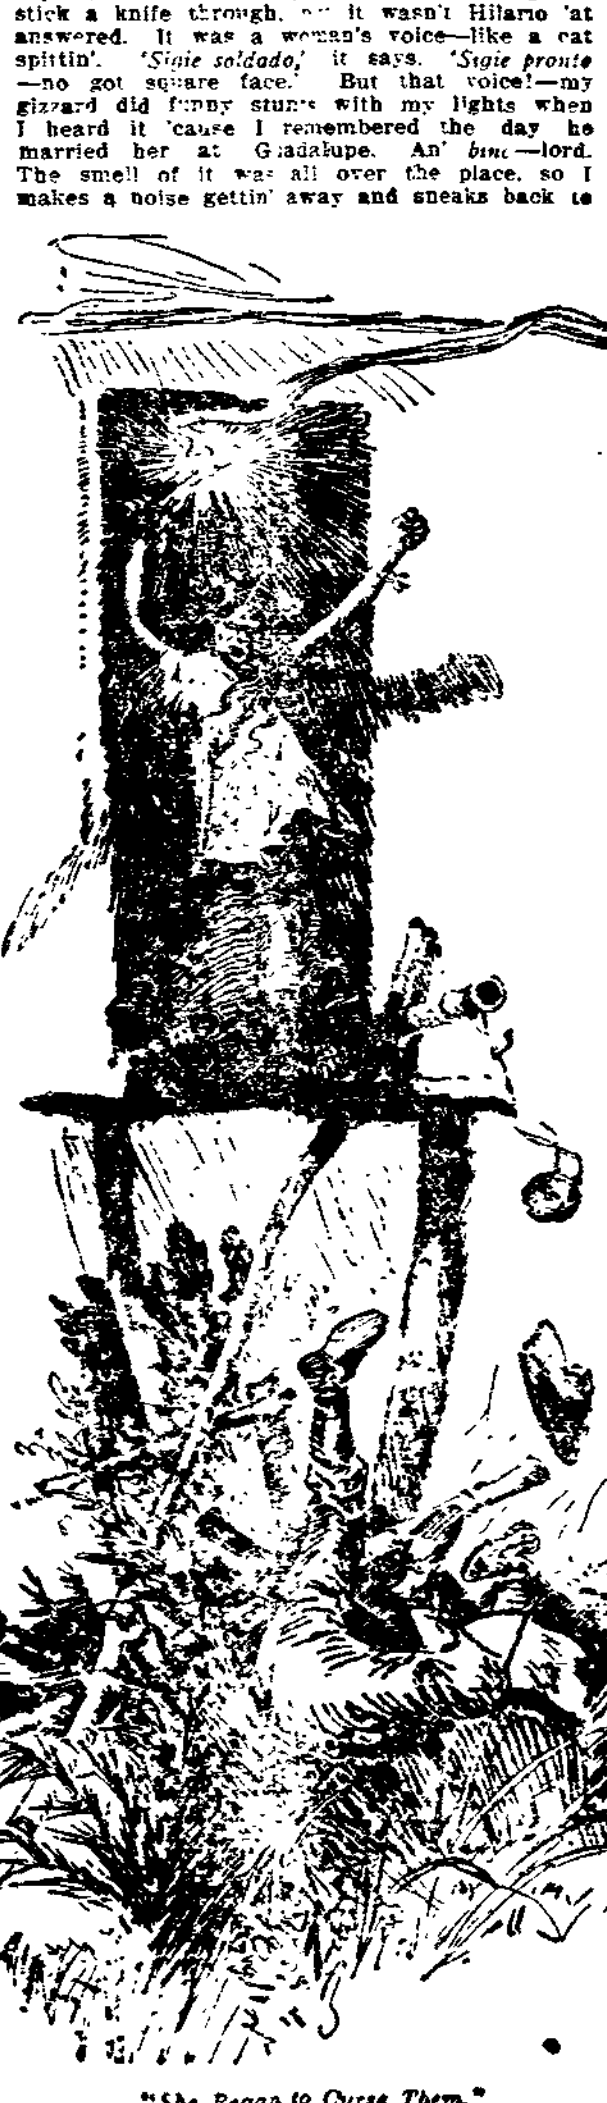

After awhile, he heard swift steps along K Troop's line. Some one kicked the blanket in his tent and said to some one else:

"All right—nobody there. You fellows crawl in and wait while I make a sure." Mickey lay very quietly now and listened. One of the men who had taken possession of his tent was dissatisfied and complaining.

"What's the use of 'em all this time? Don't I know Solenenson? Ain't I got good cause to know him?"

"Yes," soothed the other voice, "but mit'n in with officers doin's a awful bad business for buck privates. Brenner wants to be sure; he'll look along the tables an' if your friend ain't there, why then we'll know that it was sure him you seen out there with his dusky bride. But if he finds Captain Solenenson in his proper place why—"

"There—don't I know he ain't there. Ain't I come this morn' from see'n him. It's down at Hilario's oil place—where we used to git bino when we was up here on that hike las' summer. I thought jus' mit'n—you know. So I goes up an' knocks at the door. 'Abri,' says I, 'Abri—eh?' No answer. 'Sage square face,' says I, an' the door opens jus' wide enough to stick a knife through, an' it wasn't Hilario 'at answered. It was a woman's voice—like a cat spittin'." "Sage soldado," it says. "Sage pronto—no got square face." But that voice!—my gizzard did funny stunts with my lights when I heard it 'cause I remembered the day he married her at Gadalupe. An' bino—lord. The smell of it was all over the place, so I makes a noise gettin' away and sneaks back to the window. There he was on the floor in blue shirt an' trousers, with his stringy hair in the ashes, a bottle of bino held in his arms like a baby, an' at his feet, like a slim black panther, jus' waitin', an' watchin', sat the same ol' 'Carnacion de la Cruz—jus' squatin' there an' watchin' him out of her sleepy eyes. Fine fix for a officer an' gentleman that is. I told him my time was a comin' that day he robbed the Gadalupe church an' took the d'mons out of the statos's crown an' now—"

"Yes—an' didn't drive up after you'd done all the dirty work. Told you he'd court martial you for vandalism, didn't he. Oh, but you was juicy fruit. But I was easier an' Benner was worst of all. We want to watch Benner. He'd kill him."

"Kill'n's too good for him. We'll jus' drag him along to the edge of the festivities an' then wake him up. 'Carnacion an' h'm'll do the rest. I guess. Fine sight it'll be for this cocky Nth. This fool uv a cap'n uv theim ap-pearin' at the feast with his wife an' in his present state—all them foreign officers, not to mention the other regiments. Here's Benner now. Did you hear that?"

"That" was a rustle in among the grain sacks, and Mickey stood stock still, his heart at his throat. Finally he crept a little along under the shadow of a great pile of hay bales and out into the brush below the kitchens. He stopped again and listened to the talk and laughter that floated down from the camp in a deadened hum. No, it was impossible to reach his captain and he dared not call on any of his comrades for help; they all hated Solenenson, and he might approach the wrong man. He found a little path through the dense undergrowth and started along it at a shuffling run.

Private Barret was a crude hand with women, but he was a good man in an emergency. He faced the dangerous eyes of 'Carnacion de la Cruz for ten voluble minutes and he only edged a little closer to the door when he saw her hand steal up under her camisa to the knife hilt that he knew she had there. Something in his easiness finally convinced her and she stepped warily to the side of the partition door and allowed him to pass into the back room where the great bulk of Solenenson's body lay limp across the floor.

"You take head-me take feet. Carry captain out in cogen grass and hide him—sabe? When soldado come you no got captain—he gone, see? Soldado go 'way then—s' safe." But this maneuver was never executed. As Mickey bent forward to lift the heavy shoulders, some one scratched softly on the front door and a voice said:

"Abri, eh? Abri 'Carnacion, or break door."

Mickey crossed the floor and whispered to 'Carnacion. "You gotta hide captain by cell noo—cabe. He hold door five minutes—no more," and then aloud:

"Not sense guys wait out here. Can't youse leave a mut' alone. No bino here."

There was a whispered conversation without, and then a voice that Mickey had heard at the grain pile said:

"We don't want no bino an' we don't want you. We knows all about you. (This was a wild guess and far-fetched.) You're Solenenson's soldier, but you can't do him no good. We're after him an' we're goin' to git him. You better come out now an' not star to git your block knocked off. Come on now."

The door began to shake violently and Mickey knew that there was no more time to be gained by parley. He stepped softly to the door, opened it up a bit, and struck straight out into the night. The man who had stood on the little landing staggered back against a soldier below him and Mickey held the door head. In the moment of silence that followed, he heard the rear stars crack under a heavy load and he breathed easier.

It was a good sight there on the landing and it lasted five minutes before the three soldiers slipped together. He had held up the man who tried to pass over him and into the house; the stars gave way, the three went down in a crash of splintered wood.

Mickey might have endured long in the darkness under the house, for friend came to and passed on as he and Mickey had no friends. But Mickey dared not stay there, and his advantage faded before him. A strong wind sent him sprawling out into the yard and then the four heads conspicuous stood stock still in whatever attitude the light found them, and then toward the house.

There in the courtyard a torch held high above her head, her long black hair streaming on a keen shoulder, stood 'Carnacion de la Cruz like a vengeful fire. She held forth her this as she met the haughty black pearin' at the feast with his wife an' in his present state—all them foreign officers, not to mention the other regiments. Here's Benner now. Did you hear that?"

Something in his easiness finally convinced her and she stepped warily to the side of the partition door and allowed him to pass into the back room where the great bulk of Solenenson's body lay limp across the floor.

"You take head-me take feet. Carry captain out in cogen grass and hide him—sabe? When soldado come you no got captain—he gone, see? Soldado go 'way then—s' safe." But this maneuver was never executed. As Mickey bent forward to lift the heavy shoulders, some one scratched softly on the front door and a voice said:

"Abri, eh? Abri 'Carnacion, or break door."

Mickey crossed the floor and whispered to 'Carnacion. "You gotta hide captain by cell noo—cabe. He hold door five minutes—no more," and then aloud:

"Not sense guys wait out here. Can't youse leave a mut' alone. No bino here."

There was a whispered conversation without, and then a voice that Mickey had heard at the grain pile said:

"We don't want no bino an' we don't want you. We knows all about you. (This was a wild guess and far-fetched.) You're Solenenson's soldier, but you can't do him no good. We're after him an' we're goin' to git him. You better come out now an' not star to git your block knocked off. Come on now."

The door began to shake violently and Mickey knew that there was no more time to be gained by parley. He stepped softly to the door, opened it up a bit, and struck straight out into the night. The man who had stood on the little landing staggered back against a soldier below him and Mickey held the door head. In the moment of silence that followed, he heard the rear stars crack under a heavy load and he breathed easier.

It was a good sight there on the landing and it lasted five minutes before the three soldiers slipped together. He had held up the man who tried to pass over him and into the house; the stars gave way, the three went down in a crash of splintered wood.

Mickey might have endured long in the darkness under the house, for friend came to and passed on as he and Mickey had no friends. But Mickey dared not stay there, and his advantage faded before him. A strong wind sent him sprawling out into the yard and then the four heads conspicuous stood stock still in whatever attitude the light found them, and then toward the house.

There in the courtyard a torch held high above her head, her long black hair streaming on a keen shoulder, stood 'Carnacion de la Cruz like a vengeful fire. She held forth her this as she met the haughty black finger on the ground danced and flickered up across the white, upturned faces, and then she began to curse them. Her voice poured out in an eerie, striking wall that accomplished all that the unintelligible words lacked. At last Benner recovered himself.

"Aw," he scoffed, "it's only a woman—a black witch of a squaw. Come on."

"Youse better let her alone," warned Mickey, "she'll knife you." Barret had seen more than enough of 'Carnacion de la Cruz and he watched her. Her eyes were fixed above the heads of the soldiers and her face took on a look of fear. Barret turned his head to follow her gaze.

There in the very outward rim of the light circle reared a giant and sinister shape that stood half-crouched in the gloom, swaying from side to side in a rhythm of rage. It was Solenenson, half awakened and wholly berserk. Strings of his grimy white hair hung down across his blood-shot eyes, and his swollen lips

DANCED HIMSELF
OUT OF CAREERS

"My penchant for careers has ruined three careers for me and fixed my future behind the footlights, I guess," said J. J. Hughes, the nimble young man who dances with Adelaide at the Auditorium this week.

"I am 22, and for the past four years have been foot-tinging it professionally, after being 'trained' from school, a profession and a business because my feet just wouldn't keep still when a street piano struck up."

"Here is my life story: Brought up in Brooklyn, my parents, who are devout church people decided that Johnny should be a priest. So they started me in the Brooklyn seminary.
All went well for a time, and then

JOHN J. HUGHES.

my feet lost their piety; and they caught me dancing. Next father got me into the big law offices of Sheehan & Collins to read law. Here my dancing got me in bad. Here my first day. Just at this juncture the Fri-odora craze struck little old New York and I fell for it. One noon
Mr. Collins found me drilling a Flor-odora sextette of three stenographers, the office boy and two fellow students. He fired the bunch instantly.

"Well, it's a sad, sad story, but the judge's weakness for me led him to get me a job as drift clerk in the Brooklyn Trust Co. Now the president was a straight-faced gentleman who believed business was business; so at the end of the first week when he found me doing a clog step atop of the directors' mahogany table, he just 'canned' me, that's all.

"Having been fired three times for dancing I conceived the idea that the hair of the dog was the remedy for the bite, so I took up dancing as a means of livelihood, and this summer Adelaide, her girls and J. J.
Hughes are to be featured in Lew Parks' Review, that new show that is to open at the Herald Square next June."

"MISS PATSY."

Annie Buckley, who made such a hit with "Lillian Russell" in "Wildfire," is playing the part of a negro servant in Henry W. Savage's "Miss Patsy," which is to be offered at the Auditorium Friday, May 6.

Miss Buckley is a pretty young woman, who has held many prominent positions on the American stage, but her success in delineating negro characters has been such that she does not balk at burn cork to attain her desired effects.

PHIL MAHER STOCK CO.

The attraction underlined for the Auditorium for the coming week, commencing Monday evening, May 9, will be the inimitable comedian, Mr.
Phil Maher, supported by a capable company of well known artists. The opening bill will be a new version of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms."

During the engagement a list of entirely new plays will be given, among which will be the rural comedy, "The Village Vagrant," "For Home and Honor," "A Fool for Luck," a comedy of western life,
"Sang Harbor," a story of the coast,
"Born in the Blood," a dramatic offering dealing with France in the days of the guillotine, and other plays of equal attraction. One of the novel features of the program is the excellent line of vaudeville numbers presented between acts.

THE ORPHEUM.

The verdict of all who come from the Orpheum theatre is, "It's a big a star act in its line." The Tossing Austin, who opens the show, have been headliners on many programs, and their work is a "crack" from start to finish. The comedy work of Mr. Austin is clean and his juggling big hits of the bill. Mark Lea, the the audiences at each performance seem loath to let him go away. He
